For councilman District No. 6
John S. Siebert
Alfred Stahel, jr.

For member board of education
Vesta C. Muehleisen
Orton E. Darnall
Eleanor A. Weymiller

Electors should read well and study the charter amendments; the majority of which should receive the approval of the voters.

Proposition No. 4, giving the city the power to own and operate public utilities is the only one we are decidedly against; and the reason we are against public ownership of utilities is the inefficiency and rottenness of some political leaders who aspire to and hold office almost entirely for selfish reasons and personal gain.

The civic center plan and bonds are worthwhile and with the promised gift of the government of $300,000 and their loaning the money on these bonds, we recommend that they be voted for, for the construction of a joint city-county building on the harbor front.

New Officers Elected For Woman's Club

The study group of the Ocean Beach Woman's club will meet with Mrs. Clyde Walters in her home, 4546 Brighton avenue, Monday eve, April 22nd. They will review "While Rome Burns" by Alexander Woolcott. All members welcome.

Officers for the coming year for the Woman's club were nominated at the last meeting: Mrs. Mary Lee, president; Mrs. Ida White, 1st vice president; Mrs. Maude Schumacher, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Naomi Dick, recording secretary; Mrs. George B. Kenline, corresponding secretary; Mary Varney, treasurer; Blanche Wenrich, auditor; Merle Burne, parliamentarian; Ada Harris, historian.

Mrs. Merle Burne, president of Woman's club named the delegates to the spring convention of the county federation of Women's club as follows: Mesdames Mary Lee, Ida White, Maude Schumacher, Edythe Kenline, Naomi Dick, Mary Varney, Blanche Wenrich, Ada Harris, Merle Burne, and the alternates: Mesdames Carrie Mason, Alberta Hayward, Estella Wells, Alice Alford, Harriett Dumont, Lily Neal, Maude Walters, Susan Oliver and Edith Stratton.

COUNCILMEN AND ENGLISHMEN VISIT LOCAL KIWANIS

Dr. L. W. Parks was chairman of the day at Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon having for speaker Acting Mayor Al Bennett who explained briefly the several amendments to be voted at the Tuesday election. Dan Rossi candidate for reelection in the 5th councilmanic district, was also present and given a few minutes to present his qualifications.

James H. Hughes sang an Easter solo with Mrs. Hughes as piano accompanist.

James and Tom Whitehouse, relatives of James Hughes were his guests, being on tour from Wolverhampton, England. Tom Whitehouse spoke briefly and when asked how England had balanced its budget he said mostly thru numerous taxes, naming various transactions tax, the heaviest seeming to be automobile tax. On his car, a 1934 Chrysler, his 1935 yearly license was $170, then $100 insurance before he could operate it and 10c to 15c gallon tax on petrol on which he made only about 10 miles to a gallon. Radios are also taxed as well as every check and every receipt issued by one firm or individual to another.

Funeral Services Held For Native of Canada

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 2 p. m. for John Wesley Egbert at the Johnson-Saum funeral chapel, the Rev. James H. Hughes officiating and Myron Insko assisting.

Mr. Egbert suffered a severe paralytic stroke at his home, 4919 Naragansett avenue, April 8th and did not regain consciousness before passing away April 13. He was the husband of Alma Egbert of Ocean Beach, aged 75 years, and a native of Dunnville, Ontario, Canada. Deceased was the brother of Dr. William Egbert and Dr. J. H. Egbert, prominent physicians of Calgary, and Mrs. Alice Adley and Mrs. Millie Rhora of Brantford, Ontario, Can.

Mr. and Mrs. Egbert came here from Canada nineteen years ago and since 1916 have lived a retired life, taking a great interest in their garden of beautiful flowers and varied fruits.

KFJR AT PORTLAND TELLING NORTH ABOUT THIS SECTION

A letter received from KFJR at Portland, Oregon, the first of the week states that Ocean Beach and the sponsors of its local radio program will receive mention each Friday evening between 7 and 8 p. m. during the next month.

Other towns adjoining San Diego as well as the Exposition will receive favorable mention and advantages briefly outlined with the towns properly spaced in the program. With Ocean Beach, Mission Beach, Pacific Beach, and La Jolla in on this broadcast, tied up with Exposition publicity, our section should receive a number of visitors from the northwest.

Colorado River Water Soon Be Needed Here

Simmered down to salient points exhaustive information gathered over the past thirty years in a study of the water supply of San Diego county, it is now said on good authority, that all San Diego water sheds will support a population of not more than 500,000 people, therefore it is necessary to vote YES on Proposition 10, ratifying an agreement between the city of San Diego and the United States, in order that this city may acquire right and title to 155 cubic feet of water per second from the Colorado river, and a right in the All-American canal.

The following letters from Senator Ed Fletcher and the State Engineer are self explanatory:

Mr. H. H. Hartvigsen, Editor
Friend Hartvigsen:

Enclosed find letter from State Engineer Hyatt that is most interesting, pertaining to the water supply of San Diego county.

The official report will be out two weeks from date.

Very sincerely yours,
Ed Fletcher

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS
Sacramento

Honorable Ed Fletcher
Senator, 40th District,
Capitol Building
Sacramento, California.

Dear Colonel Fletcher:

This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of March 17th, 1935, regarding water supplies available from basins tributary to San Diego county.

It has been estimated that complete development without regard to cost or economic feasibility of all the water resources of San Diego county, including the seven principal streams, Santa Margarita, San Luis Rey, San Dieguito, San Diego, Sweetwater, Otay and Tia Juana (in United States) rivers and minor stream basins will give a maximum annual safe yield of 160,000 acre ft. This quantity of water will provide an adequate supply for 125,000 acres for either irrigation or municipal use. Should the irrigated area increase from the present area of 48,000 acres to 75,000 acres or approximately 50 percent, and an adequate water supply be furnished these lands, there will remain, if the maximum development is made in the county a sufficient water supply to support a population of not more than 500,000 in the metropolitan area.

The safe yield of the present development in San Diego county including El Capitan reservoir, and including private pumping plants has been estimated to be 7,000 acre-feet, or approximately one-half of the maximum possible development of local water supplies.

The San Diego report presents detailed data and information on the water supplies and agricultural lands of the county; the present status of irrigation and municipal water supply development; the utilization of water supplies from surface and underground sources; the irrigable lands and water requirements and the domestic and municipal water requirements of the metropolitan area; the flood flows of the principal streams and probable frequency of occurrence; and presents a plan for the complete development of the water resources of the San Diego river basin and flood control of the San Diego river in Mission Bay area.

The text of the report has to be mimeographed, plates made and printed, and the report assembled and bound before it will be ready for distribution.

Very truly yours,
(signed) Edward Hyatt
State Engineer

Candidates Talk To Ocean Beach Voters

A fair attendance greeted candidates at the Ocean Beach school Wednesday evening in a public meeting sponsored by the Young Men's North Shore Political club and other organizations.

O. E. Darnall, candidate for the School Board, was the first speaker and gave a short outline of why San Diego's school system was outstanding in efficiency as well as low cost per pupil. He stressed the point that the system had consistently been under good leadership and guided by the highest type of educators.

Alfred Stahel, jr., candidate for council in the 6th district was the second speaker and said he was absolutely an independent candidate making no promises, except to represent the people, the voters, to the best of his ability, and that he could be relied upon to give strict interpretation of the city charter.

John S. Siebert, also a candidate for council in the sixth district, said he had been sought and persuaded to run for the office of councilman, that he had made no promises and now that he was in the race did ask the vote of the people in order that they might have a different administration of their public affairs.

Bessie L. Seifert, candidate for council of district No. 3, said she was the wife of the army flier Frank Seifert, well known in San Diego, that if elected she would treat with deference any person calling upon her office; that she believed the beaches were a real asset to the city of San Diego and believed they should receive more recognition.

Walter C. Wurfel, opposing Mrs. Seifert in race for honors in the 3rd district, said he was for strict law enforcement and would live up to charter provisions.

Walter W. Austin, former mayor and candidate for council in district No. 2, said he owned property at Ocean Beach, Mission Beach, Roseville and one time at La Jolla. He made a forceful plea for the voters to ignore the propaganda of the daily papers in their effort to elect "the four horsemen" a hand-picked slate, that no doubt was obligated to certain interests of the city. In closing Austin heartily endorsed Mrs. Seifert's candidacy and said he believed the electors would make no mistake by placing her on the council.

Bruce Stannard of Encanto, candidate for council district No. 5, answered a number of Austin's statements, especially relating as to "who" might be qualified and could afford to serve on the city council, citing his own case of who could afford to be patriotic in time of the world war, when he, a man past the draft age, veteran of the Spanish-American war, sold his general store at Encanto for a fourth of its value, endorsed the buyer's note at a local bank for the first payment, in order that he might go as an infantryman to serve his country in time of need.

The citizens who attended the meeting felt well repaid for their time, especially so since the candidates warmed to their subject in an unusual manner.

STRAND THEATRE TO HAVE BRILLIANT MARQUEE

The Strand Theatre is this week receiving a fresh coat of paint to brighten up its front, and that's not all the decoration to be had, for manager F. J. Gruber has closed a deal for a handsome new marquee to be erected by the Neon sign dealers. This marquee will be an awning effect of permanent nature, built in latest type and studded with some 450 electric outlets for lighting effect and circled with Neon tubing in various colors.

The improvement will cost in the neighborhood of from $1500 to $2000 and will take considerable more electric energy than the Strand's present signs. It will also be a most marked improvement for Newport avenue.

The News does Job Printing

New Folders Wanted About Ocean Beach

In a called meeting of directors of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce held Monday evening, initial plans were made to have new folders printed to advertise Ocean Beach, and tell in a brief way the advantages of living in Ocean Beach. The meeting was prompted by a letter from the San Diego Chamber of Commerce requesting folders to place in new racks they will have with information for newcomers. The folders now on hand are several years old and not suitable for the general distribution to be had during the Exposition.

A committee of the Woman's club was present also and requested co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce in cleaning up the curbing on Abbott, Bacon, Cable streets and Sunset Cliffs Blvd., as well as paralleling streets. This committee had been to see the city manager who promised to furnish the labor if the citizens of Ocean Beach would furnish suitable flowers for these parkings.

Preliminary mention was also made for holding a Pioneer Day celebration the last Saturday in June, with a barbecue feast and general good time, which affair proved so successful last year.

New Home Started For G. B. Kenline

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Kenline a few weeks ago purchased a residence lot at 4468 Newport avenue and Monday construction was started on a six-room frame-stucco home and garage to cost in the neighborhood of $3,500. The contract was let to the Denstedt company.

Mr. Kenline has been a resident of Ocean Beach since grammar school days, leaving to attend the University of California at Berkeley to study electrical engineering then going east to accept a position with the Westinghouse company. He returned here about seven years ago, newly married, and has been an estimator with the San Diego Gas & Electric Company since that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenline, after looking over a number of home sites, chose a fine view lot at the head of Newport avenue, where they hope in June to be happily and conveniently domiciled in a modern home, looking out over the westerly slope of Point Loma to the placid waters of the Pacific.

WHAT! NO PHILCO REFRIGERATORS

Last week in our news item of the new lines recently added by the Strand Radio Co. we skipped a line making the article read "... they also carry Philco and Tiffany refrigerators." Well, now, Mr. Lloyd says there are no such machines to his knowledge, so we look back and find we should have said Philco and Tiffany radios, Kelvinator and Norge refrigerators.

TRADE YOUR OLD WATER HEATER FOR A NEW ONE

You can trade in your old water heater as the first payment on a new storage automatic water heater, according to an advertisement of O. W. Jordan, local plumber, in this issue of The News, however, this liberal offer is said to hold good for April only.

It will pay you to look up this ad. There is no down payment, except your old water heater, and terms may be arranged on the balance.

SEND YOUR FRIENDS THE NEWS THREE MONTHS FOR 50c

If you have friends interested at all in Ocean Beach or San Diego, drop into the News office at 1922 Bacon street, and have the Ocean Beach News sent to them. The price for three months is only 50c, any place in the U. S. or possessions.

Civic Leaders Urge Voters Pass Bonds

"Vote the Civic Center employment bonds and stimulate building activity, provide work for thousands, obtain assistance from the federal government in the form of a cash gift and loan, and get started on a project that will be a credit to the City and County."

This was the message broadcast throughout the County this week as civic leaders in every community redoubled their efforts to get out a record-breaking vote at Tuesday's election.

San Diego City and County are voting separately on the issue, and a two-thirds majority is required in both counts to assure success of the proposal to build a combined City-County building.

Recent passage by congress of the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill carries assurance that the federal government will contribute from 30 to 50 percent of the cost of the project, and loan the remainder, it was declared. The employment bonds would not be sold, but would be pledged to the government as security for the loan.

The arrangement for financing the project is exceptionally favorable to the City and County, it is pointed out. A 30 percent gift, or $300,000, would cut the cost to $700,000, and the loan covering this would be repaid by applying the $45,000 now paid out annually in rents for widely scattered City and County offices. Under this plan there would not be any increase in taxes.

Need for the Civic Center is acute, the County-wide general committee stressing the fact that the City Hall and Court House have outlived their usefulness, and that the present set-up is not only inefficient, but uneconomical, and adding:

"This is YOUR CIVIC CENTER. Every friend of the Civic Center not only must vote 'YES', but must contact his friends and see that they do likewise."

Well Known Local Woman Laid to Rest

A well known old time citizen of this section, Harriette French Christenson, beloved wife of John C. Christenson, passed away at the home of her sister in San Diego Monday, funeral services being held Wednesday, April 17, at the Smith Mortuary, 2876 El Cajon avenue.

Mrs. Christenson came to this section twenty-three years ago and while living in Ocean Beach was active in local affairs. She was influential in organizing the first community church which conducted its services in a tent secured for the purpose, where the Holdridge garage now stands on Newport avenue. She was the mother of Mrs. Ray Heywood of Ocean Beach and Mrs. Lee Collum, sister of Mrs. Mae Gilchrist and Edward L. French, cousin of Mrs. E. A. Crowell, all of San Diego; a native of Illinois.

California Shares In Public Works

According to the latest official advice from Washington to Director Earl Lee Kelly of the Department of Public Works, California will receive from President Roosevelt's $4,800,000,000 Work Relief fund approximately $5,200,000 that will be available for new construction projects on the state highway system in addition to those now itemized in the 1935-37 budget.

In addition to this amount for our state highways we are informed thru the president of the American Association of State Highway Officials that $1,700,000 will be made available to the state department for expenditure on county feeder roads.

Another allotment of approximately $9,100,000 will be made to California for construction of railroad grade separations on both state and county roads.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

RUSSIA APPROVES THE SECURITY PACT PLAN BUT POLAND REMAINS ALOOF.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

SOVIET Russia is ready to line up with Great Britain, France and Italy in promoting the general European security pact which is the basis of England's plan for peace. This was brought out by the visit to Moscow of Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and his conferences with Dictator Josef Stalin and Maxim Litvinov, Soviet foreign commissar. According to the joint communiqué given the press, these statesmen "were of the opinion that in the present international situation it is more than ever necessary to pursue the endeavor to promote the building up of a system of collective security in Europe as contemplated in the Anglo-French communiqué of the third of February, and in conformity with the principles of the League of Nations."

M. Litvinov

It was made clear that Germany and Poland would be welcome to enter the arrangement, but that it would go ahead even without them.

Captain Eden then went on to Warsaw to talk things over with the Poles; and even as he was departing from Moscow the Soviet press launched another fierce attack on Germany. Michael Tukhachevsky, vice commissar for defense, in an article in the newspaper Pravda, declared Germany would have an army of 849,000 by the summer, exceeding the French army by 40 per cent and almost equaling the Soviet army in size.

He charged Hitler with "lulling France to sleep" with anti-Soviet war talk in the hope France would not realize her own peril.

Tukhachevsky's view that Germany contemplates attacking France was supported by an authorized article in the weekly Journal de Moscou which asserted the leaders of the reich realized "the exceptional risk to which Germany would subject herself by invasion of the tremendous territories of the U. S. S. R.—a country possessing powerful armaments and unlimited opportunities for improving and increasing these armaments."

"It is almost probable," the Journal said, "that under certain circumstances Hitler will prefer other fields of aggression, and an intensified revision of the map of Europe will be started not in the east but in the west."

POLAND appears to have decided to play a lone hand in the European embroglio, though she remains friendly to Germany. It is reported that Captain Eden's visit to Warsaw was as disappointing as was that of Sir John Simon to Berlin. The Polish government is determined to sign no pact that would commit the nation to fight for Russia against Germany or for Germany against Russia and France, nor will it permit either German or Russian troops to be transported across Poland. The Polish statesmen say they will sign a series of bilateral pacts, and will go as far as any other nation in parallel disarmament. They assert that they have no alliance with Germany, though their mutual troubles have been settled for the next ten years, and that the alliance with France still holds good.

FROM Tokyo there came a statement indicating that Japan would give at least moral support to the European powers that are seeking agreements to counteract Hitler's move for the rearmament of Germany. It was given out by Eiichi Amai, the frequently quoted spokesman for the foreign office. He said Japan will hold aloof from the European crisis and that there would be no far eastern Locarno pact, but that "we cannot think of any alliance with Germany." Tokyo, asserted Amai, is ready to discuss with Russia some degree of demilitarization of the eastern frontiers.

Eiichi Amai

NINETEEN cardinals met with Pope Pius in a secret consistory; and to them he delivered an emphatic denunciation of war, which, he said, "would be so enormous a crime, so foolish a manifestation of fury, we believe it absolutely impossible." If, however, there is someone who wishes to commit "this nefarious crime," then, the holy father said, he could do nothing else than pray to God to "destroy those people who desire war." At this moment, he continued, the "clamor of war is universally diffused and the cause of agitation to all and arouses in everyone the greatest fear."

The consistory approved the canonization of Blessed Thomas More, King Henry VIII's chancellor, and Bishop John Fisher of England, who lost their heads for opposing Henry's marriage to Anne Boleyn.

OBEDIENT alleged directions from the yacht on which President Roosevelt was fishing in Florida waters, the majority in the house refused to accept the restrictions injected in the work relief bill and sent it back to conference to have these removed.

The restrictions objectionable to the administration were those requiring senate confirmation of administrative officers of the program and that in loans and grants to states at least one-third of the money should be expended for direct labor. The latter requirement, according to Secretary Ickes and others, would result in the exclusion of rural electrification, slum clearance and similar projects.

Defending the move to send the bill back to conference, Buchanan of Georgia said: "The President is assuming responsibility. All we ask is to give him a bill that he can work on in shifting from dole to employment."

In replying to Buchanan, Representative Robert Bacon (Rep., N. Y.) contended that the labor provision was needed in order to "kick out pet local projects" and afford as much direct relief of unemployment as possible.

"Congress has reached a pretty low ebb," declared Minority Leader Bertrand Snell (Rep., N. Y.), "when it can't even pass on a conference report without receiving orders from the Chief Executive."

STANLEY REED, the new solicitor general, obtained from the Supreme court permission to dismiss the government's appeal in the Belcher lumber case. Therefore there probably will be no decision as to the constitutionality of the national industrial recovery act by the chief tribunal before congress takes action on the bill to extend the recovery law.

Belcher was indicted for violating the hour and wage provisions of the lumber code but Judge W. I. Grubb of the Federal District court in Birmingham held against the government. The indictment was dismissed. Grubb ruled the NRA law unconstitutional. The government appealed to the Supreme court in an effort to expedite the decision.

REPLACEMENT of the AAA's system of crop control is seen as a future potentiality of a new organization established at the Department of Agriculture under Rexford G. Tugwell. The organization consolidates federal agencies dealing with soil erosion, and Tugwell is expected to direct the expenditure of about a billion dollars in public works funds on the public land program.

R. G. Tugwell

At present plans call for retirement of millions of acres of marginal lands now contributing to surpluses, which experts contend will prove a more effective way of dealing with overproduction than AAA's policy of taxing commodities for acreage reduction. The latter is meeting increased opposition, due to rising living costs and increasing competition from foreign powers. There will probably be little immediate change in crop control plans, since the Tugwell program will require considerable time before it can be operated effectively.

FOR the second time the United States Supreme court reversed the convictions and death sentences of two of the Scottsboro negroes who were accused of assault on two white girls. The court held that since negroes in Alabama are not permitted to serve on juries, they are denied "equal protection of the laws" in violation of the Fourteenth amendment. It declared the state court error in not quashing the indictments.

This was a big victory for the colored race, but in another decision by the Supreme court the negroes were the losers. The tribunal ruled that the Democratic party in Texas is a voluntary association, not subject to control by the state legislature, and as such may exclude colored persons from voting in its primaries.

THROUGH the efforts of Donald Richberg, chairman of the NIRE, an agreement was reached by the bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers, whereby the prevailing coal code is extended to June 16 and a threatened strike of about half a million miners averted. The present wages and hours of work are continued. President Lewis of the miners insisted the union had not yielded to the operators; but the fact remained that if it had not consented to the agreement Mr. Richberg could and would have extended the code by executive order. This would have placed the union in the undesired position of opposing and defying the administration, and would have weakened the effect of its advocacy of the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Black-Connery bill and the Guffy bill which would virtually convert the bituminous coal industry into a public utility.

THERE were further dust storms in the already severely afflicted plateau district of southwest Kansas, southeast Colorado and parts of New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma. In western Kansas the farmers began the construction of earthen breastworks against the wind, and a federal appropriation of $250,000 for this work was received. Fears that the dust storms would cause an epidemic of pneumonia were allayed when it was found that there were no germs of that disease on laboratory plates exposed in the dust-filled atmosphere by aviators.

Tornadoes in Mississippi and Texas resulted in the deaths of at least half a dozen persons and the injury of many others.

WHEN the Illinois legislature, at the behest of Governor Horner and the federal administration, passed a state recovery act the New Dealers hailed this as an example that all states should follow. Now County Judge Homer W. Hall at Bloomington has held that the act is unconstitutional. He also declared the national automobile code inoperative as applied to Illinois.

Under the state recovery act, the Judge remarked, an unlawful delegation of the authority of the state legislature has brought about a situation whereby violations of the state act can be prosecuted by the state only through the sanction and by the authority of the federal director of codes.

"Delegated authority may not be redelegated," the judge said. "Authority delegated by the people to the legislature permitting the making of laws may not be redelegated by the legislature to communities, bureaus, code authorities or executives, allowing these agencies to make rules with the effect of laws, the violation of which makes the individual amenable to the criminal statutes."

CREATION of a new relief bureau in New York was demanded by Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the board of aldermen, who asserted that twenty millions of dollars a year in relief funds has been wasted through the incompetency, red tape, bureaucracy, and the domination by professional social service workers of the emergency relief bureau and the state temporary emergency relief administration.

BELGIUM'S new deal program, derived from President Roosevelt's policies, was launched by the young premier, Paul Van Zeeland, and he was given an overwhelming vote of confidence by the senate and chamber of deputies. The effect of going off the gold standard already is being felt, for prices of food staples are going up. The government warned traders that any undue increases in prices would be punished severely. Premier Van Zeeland said:

"I am a keen admirer of President Roosevelt, who obtained essential results mainly in allowing his country to work in peace. He certainly committed errors. Had he based his program of economic expansion upon gold the world crisis would be ended now. But I apply those Rooseveltian measures to Belgium which I consider good."

INVESTIGATION of the administration of the Virgin Islands by Gov. Paul Pearson was ordered by the senate, five of whose members will conduct the inquiry. The sum of $12,000 was appropriated to cover their expenses. Pearson is a holdover from the Hoover administration and charges against him were made by Paul Yates, formerly his administrative assistant.

DIRECT negotiations with Italy over the border dispute were broken off by the Ethiopian government, which sent a new note to the League of Nations. Special measures were taken to protect foreigners in Addis Ababa. The Italian government did not take this rupture seriously, still hoping a peaceful arrangement might be reached without the intervention of the league. It was reported in Paris that most of the Italian troops that started for Eritrea and Italian Somaliland have been diverted to Rhodes and Libya because of Germany's sudden rearmament plan.

FOREIGN SECRETARY SIMON returned to England from his historic talks with Chancellor Hitler, and reported to the cabinet that Germany is seeking return of the colonies she lost in the war and a greatly increased navy. He said that Hitler admits Germany's air force equals that of Britain. Prime Minister MacDonald then called on King George to whom he gave a preliminary report of Simon's talks, which have been described as "disappointing."

Chancellor Hitler

Hitler made a bold play for Anglo-German understanding, declaring both nations should unite to defend western civilization against Communism and the colored races. Briefly, his demands were:

First—Germany must have an army with a minimum of 36 divisions—500,000 men—as decreed.

Second—Germany wants parity in the air with Britain. Hitler admitted that Germany now possesses equality with Britain. Hitler stressed the danger to which Germany is exposed in the air. He declared that Russia is using Czechoslovakia as a European air base. He demanded return of certain Czechoslovakian territory and repatriation of 3,500,000 German residents there.

Third—Hitler wants a navy equal to one-third of the British fleet, which is tantamount to 400,000 tons. The British admiralty is opposed to such a ratio and Germany has been invited to bilateral naval discussions in London.

Fourth—Germany wants return of her former colonies. Little encouragement was given Hitler on this score.

Fifth—Hitler refused to have anything to do with an eastern pact, though he is willing to enter nonaggression pacts with Germany's neighbors, as he did with Poland.

Sixth—Hitler is prepared to sign a pact of noninterference in the affairs of Austria, but only if it means noninterference by all powers.

President Signs Philippine Constitution

Another Step Taken Toward Independence

Another step toward the complete independence of the Philippine Islands was taken when the Philippine constitution was signed by President Roosevelt in the cabinet room of the White House. The picture above shows the President as he affixed his signature to the document. Seated beside the President are Secretary of War Dern and Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine senate.

Others in the group are: Brigadier General Cox, chief of the bureau of insular affairs; Frank Murphy, governor general of the Philippine Islands; Secretary of State Cordell Hull; Senator Key Pittman of Nevada; chairman of the senate foreign relations committee; Miguel Cuaderno, member of the Philippine constitutional convention; Pedro Guevara, Philippine resident commissioner; Manuel Roxas, member of the Philippine constitutional convention; Francisco Delgado, Philippine resident commissioner; Claro M. Recto, president of the Philippine constitutional convention, and Gen. Teodoro Sandiko, vice president of the constitutional convention.

When news of the signing was received in the islands celebrations were held, as the Filipinos rejoiced over their coming independence. Many in this country, however, view possible consequences with alarm.

In the News: 1—President Roosevelt signing the Philippine constitution; with him at the table are Secretary of War Dern and Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate. 2—Baron Von Neurath, German foreign minister, who assisted Hitler in the discussion with Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, over Germany's rearmament plans. 3—Harry Hopkins, federal relief administrator, right, testifying before the house committee on education.

Russia Takes Up Ostrich Farming

The Russian Soviet is engaged in introducing new varieties of animals and birds into that country. The picture shows a setting of ostrich eggs being placed in an incubator. When all the zoological gardens in Russia are supplied with ostriches, collective farms will be stocked with the birds for commercial purposes. Russia's effort to build up her internal resources have been devoted not only to industry but to agriculture. Her vast area, covering one-third of Europe and one-half of Asia, offers a variety of climate and soils which lend themselves to an infinite variety of products. Within its 30,000-mile frontier are many undeveloped resources which the present government is attempting to develop. Stalin's recent order relaxing restrictions on individual farmers is reported to have had a beneficial effect on the agricultural situation.

Bootblack Millionaire

Is Heir to Estate of Cattle King

For 25 years Michael Bellotti, forty-seven, has been "shining 'em up" at his bootblack stand at Harrison, N. J. The thought that fabulous riches might come to him to enable him to lead the life of a Croesus never entered his mind. No wonder he looks so quizzically at the letter.

The letter informs him that he and his brother, a New York bookbinder, have been named as the heirs of the $5,000,000 estate left by his uncle, Giovanni Bellotti, an Argentine cattle king who died at the age of eighty-seven.

Mike, however, refuses to be dazzled by his new fortune; and refuses to quit his business until he sees the money—and has it stowed away in a bank.

The humble job of shining shoes seems not only to teach patience but caution, and Bellotti's head seems to be fixed securely on his shoulders.

HERE'S COLOR PROBLEM

Wilford Price, three and one-half years old, has proved a color problem to all who have seen him, for he has two distinct colorings of hair, eyes, and complexion. The hair on the right side of his head is red, like his mother's; while the left is decidedly blond, like his father's. His right eye is brown, while his left eye is blue.

A Pair of "Babes" in the Southland

Before the recent meeting at St. Petersburg, Fla., of the Boston Braves and the House of David baseball nine, Babe Ruth patted the whiskers of Babe Steinecke, House of David player, just for luck. But the little known Babe "out-Babed" the Bambino of the big show by hitting a home run with one on, while Mr. Ruth garnered a lone single.

He signed his name and sat back, brows drawn and after a time nodded vindictively.

Out at the Hoot Owl Ben Elliott went through a week of unbroken dismay. It was a situation such as he had never dreamed of facing.

Dawn had heard and seen, and . . . believed! She had fled the hall, convincing him of her belief in Lydia's accusation. Days had passed and he had heard nothing from her. He was impelled to go to her but, under such circumstances, a young man does not do that. There are some affairs so embarrassing that words fall flat.

His men knew the story, of course; all the country knew it. But none mentioned it to him, none willingly betrayed to him their knowledge of his humiliation. He waited and suffered and tried to rally his self-possession.

He was walking, wondering grimly what Dawn was thinking then, what she was doing; he was hearing once again the biting voice of Lydia; hearing, in memory, the hush fall over that dance hall.

He was wholly alone. Far behind him loggers worked in the timber; down yonder the mill sent up its plume of smoke and he could hear the distant puffing of the exhaust in the stillness.

No wind blew; nothing stirred . . . that he could see. He could not observe that slight, cautious movement to his left, that figure which watched him some and edged out through young hemlocks to a point from which his view was unobscured but where he still had good cover.

The man up there stood still. Slowly he shook off his mittens and with a bare thumb released the safety on the rifle he carried, settled slowly to one knee, placing it on the tail of the other snowshoe. His breath was not just steady as he snuggled his cheek against the rifle butt. No man's would be, shooting from ambush that way. Nor were his hands just steady.

He sighted carefully, trying to still the tremor of his arms. He let his breath slip out slowly, he squeezed. The crack of the rifle echoed and reached across the chopping. Ben Elliott lay still, as he had pitched on his face. One of his hands was outstretched, the other pinned beneath him. His face, one cheek in the snow, was turned toward the man who had fired but it was far away.

For many minutes the man in the timber remained kneeling. Elliott did not stir. Then, cautiously, the killer groped for the ejected shell, slipped it into his pocket, raised to his feet and, backing cautiously, struck into the deep timber.

CHAPTER X

The rifle bullet had passed so close above Ben's head that he had felt its breath even before he was aware of its whine.

A bullet . . . here . . . for him! A hunter? But what would a hunter be shooting at here? That bullet was designed for him and had missed by inches. And he was pitching forward, simulating a fall, letting himself go limp. It was the only protection he could conjure.

He saw nothing, no movement, even; heard nothing. He was a single, scalp creeping with an odd sensation as he waited for another bullet from these heights to the eastward.

But no other came. Ben lay there until deep dusk had fallen. Then he rose to his hands and knees, watching, listening. After a moment he stood still. Then, resolutely, he left the road, walled through the deep snow, crossed the railroad track and toiled up the heights. He went on, through the snow to the first fringe of trees. Then he spoke, in a light halt: "Hi!"—and immediately dropped behind a stump.

After a moment he rose, went forward again and entered the shadows boldly. No one was there, for certain, but before he had gone more than a few paces he came on that which he sought: a snowshoe track, visible in the gloom because of the softness of the snow. Whoever had gone that way had sunk deeply.

He followed this out of the thick timber to a little clearing. The trail was not visible in the darkness so he struck a match and holding it cupped in one hand, bent low.

The flare showed the track of a long, narrow shoe plainly and as he moved the tiny torch along toward its tip he stopped all movement. The match burned out. He moved on to the next track and lighted another. He examined several of the imprints made by the shoe. Then he went as rapidly as possible back down the slope to the road and started on to camp.

After supper Ben called Bird-Eye Blaine to one side.

"I'd like to have you harness the supply team and spend an evening in town," he said.

The little barn boss cocked an inquisitive eye.

"Just in town, Mister Elliott? Or for somethin' special?"

"Something special. . . . But no one else is to know. What I want to find out is this: Who is wearing a pair of Canadian snowshoes with the webbing in the toe of one foot so it makes a hole about this shape."

Quickly he sketched a rough outline on a leaf of his notebook. Bird-Eye scanned it and nodded.

"Take it easy. Maybe you won't find out tonight. But make a start, anyhow. If you should have any luck, stop in at the siding on your way back. I'll ride that far with you."

It was after midnight when Ben Elliott roused from his sleepless bed to hear Bird-Eye speaking to his team outside. He crawled out of his blankets and opened the office door to let the other in, but before he asked any questions lighted a lamp.

"Well, how about it?"—as he replaced the chimney.

Bird-eye looked at him narrowly. "I found th' shoes," he said with an emphatic nod. "And I found out who's they be."

"Good!"

The barn boss blinked.

"I dunno 'bout that. It ain't so good, I'd say. They're the property," he said with profound emphasis, "av wan Red Bart Delaney, a celebrated killer from somewheres in Canada!"

From the second small bedroom separated from the office by a board partition, a bed creaked sharply. Elliott did not hear it.

"So that's it!" he said softly.

"Yes! That's it! Th' presence av a rattlesnake iolke Red Bart in th' community don't forecast nawthing but th' hottest kind av trouble! Ye've heard av him, ain't it?"

"Yes, I have. He was mixed up in that spruce war on the Zbing-Wauk. A hired killer."

"Killer is right! 'Nd what may he be a-doing in these parts?"

Elliott did not reply to that question. "What else did you find out?" he asked.

"Well, he brought his stinkin' presence into Tincup Wednesday night on his own two stinkin' feet! He's favorin' Joe Platte's hotel. Th' snowshoes was in th' office 'nd it came up so's I didn't have to seem curious to find out whose they was. He's here lookin' fer cedar, he says. But it gives a body a lot av bother wonderin' what his real reason moight be. Lyin' 's natural as breathin' to th' loikes."

"I can tell you," Ben said. "He's gunning for me, Bird-Eye."

"Saints! . . . I thought ut, I did! Ah, me b'y—"

"Yes, he started today. I was shot at with a rifle two miles up the road just at sundown. The man who shot at me wore a snowshoe with the web broken. He wouldn't be lending his snowshoes."

Bird-Eye stood motionless and silent for a moment before he spoke.

"Thin th' sooner we give him both barrels av somethin', th' safer ye'll be, can't help but think Bird-Eye's advice is good. Swear out a warrant for him the first thing. This is a time for caution. It'll do you no good to take risks."

"I'll not walk into any traps, but if Brandon thinks he can make me hunt my hole—"

"Oh, Brandon!" The cry was bitter and Martin threw his arms wide in a gesture of helplessness. "You've got to watch him as you've never watched a man in your life. Why, son, you don't know, you don't dream, of the ends he'll go to!"

"But I thought you didn't know him," Ben said, puzzled. "I thought you said you were a stranger to this country."

"Yes, But stories travel. And isn't your experience today enough to convince anyone of the man's ruthlessness?"

"Oh, sure," Ben agreed, but still wondering at Martin's mood. It was not just easy to believe that a steady-going, mature man should be so moved by mere tales.

"You're right. He'll stop at nothing, not even murder. And I agree with you that he's got to be watched. But if I ran into my burrow or didn't try to get at the bottom of this thing, he'd gain part of what he's after, you see. No, that can't be done."

He rose and began to pace the floor.

"And it's not only the Hoot Owl, now, that's at stake. He's mixed up in more important matters than just property. He caught me foul where it hurt . . . hurt!" Martin, following him with his eyes, winced. "He's used a woman to come between me and the finest girl that ever walked the earth!" Martin looked away as Ben confronted him, almost as one will avert his face from a painful sight. "Lastly, he brings a hired killer to polish me off. Darned if I know what to expect next. But one thing he can bank on: I won't run. I'll drive him into the open if I can by hook or crook, but I won't run!"

"No, I know you won't. But I wish . . . Oh, how I wish you'd counsel with some one else, with Able or anyone. You're young, you're in danger. . . . And this matter you just mentioned: Can't you think of Dawn a little? If you love her can't you see that she has a right to believe that you will protect yourself?"

The man's voice had fallen to a broken whisper. He held out both hands in appeal and tears sprang into his eyes. This man, this mature, quiet gentleman, this stranger to the country, begging him with tears in eyes and voice to consider Dawn McManus struck Ben dumbfounded.

"Oh, it's only that you've shown yourself to be so decent," Martin said after a moment, emotions under better control. "I hate to see you putting yourself in danger."

"I won't stick my head into any noose," Ben replied. "Lord, it's late.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birthing contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the mill, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames, discovers the trap was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time limit is set. Ben meets Dawn McManus and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract, is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare. Brandon compels a woman (known only as "Lydia"), who is in his power, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl. At a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, Lydia makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed, Elliott can only make a feeble denial. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for him.

Misther Elliott! He's a hard chunk, him. It's Nick Brandon's work, who's tried everything else 'nd who'll not refuse to try 'murder to get ye down, Benny b'y!"

"Likely you're right," Ben said, and rubbed his chin with a knuckle. "But we'd have to prove that, first. There's nothing to worry about, now we know the man's here to get me. Likely he thought he got me. Still there, was he? Um . . . Well, that's something to think over, Bird-Eye. You better hit for camp, now, and get some sleep. I may call you in the forenoon."

Bird-Eye sniffed and twisted his head gravely and after adding imprecations on Nicholas Brandon and warning Ben to stay close to the office, departed.

He could be heard unblinking his team and climbing into the sleigh; and when the frosty runners screamed in departure sounds came from that second bedroom behind the partition, the door opened and John Martin stood looking out. His dark eyes held on Ben Elliott, anxious and troubled.

"I couldn't help hearing," he said simply. "Do you mind?"

"Of course not, John. Looks like lively times!"—with a grin.

"It's none of my affair, Elliott, but I'm an older man than you. I've seen trouble . . . a-plenty." His voice dropped significantly, as though old wounds were being opened. "I've heard of Delaney. Every man in the timber has heard of the Zbing-Wauk war. I We'll need clear heads to meet this situation. Better get into the old blankets."

But he did not sleep at once. He lay awake a long time, thinking of Red Bart Delaney and Brandon and wondering how he could prove their relationship. . . . And speculating on Martin's outbursts, the man's keen hatred of Brandon, whom he probably had never seen, his intense interest in Dawn McManus. . . . Something strange and unnatural was there, Elliott told himself. Still, he added, you could stake your last hope on a man like John Martin.

Early the next forenoon the merchants and traders and loafers in the business places on Tincup's main thoroughfare saw something to nip their attention.

Ben Elliott came driving into town at a spanking trot, his team of alert drivers coated with frost. This was nothing unusual. But when he brought them to a crunching halt before the bank building, over which Nicholas Brandon worked and lived, jumped out, threw blankets over their backs and tied them to a post, a few necks were craned.

Throughout the evening before Brandon had gorged himself on a sense of relief. At eight he had passed Bart Delaney on the street. None had been about to notice that although Brandon appeared only to overtake and pass the man that, in reality, they spoke briefly and cautiously.

"Well?"

"In his tracks. . . . Two mile above th' mill."

"Was he alone?"

"Sure. . . . They'll find him stiff."

"When do we settle?"

"As soon as the bank opens tomorrow."

Inside, the man seethed with a savage exultation. He crossed the street, drunk with the feeling of relief, mounted to his office and drank to his own success. . . . And drank again. For hours he sat at his desk, whisky bottle at his elbow and when he went down the hallway to his bedroom at the rear he carried the bottle with him.

His first move for the day, once in his office, was to draw the cork of a fresh flask and drink deeply. A growl ling warmth ran through him. That was better. It was not comfortable to wake up, thinking of a man lying lifeless on the snow . . . at your orders.

"Good Morning," He Said in a Hoarse Gasp.

Soon, now, word would be coming into town from Hoot Owl, tragic, final word. He must be in shape to meet the news dispassionately. No one would know his part in the killing; none would guess. Still, it would not be easy to have people saying that Ben Elliott was dead. . . . Elliott is dead; Elliott is dead. . . . The words spun about in his mind, a savage chant, and Brandon wanted to be glad but could not. Elliott was gone, though. The Hoot Owl was at his mercy, and Dawn . . . Dawn!

And then he turned to the opening door.

His jaw sagged, a light retching sound came from his throat as breath drained out. . . . Ben Elliott was standing there and smiling good-naturedly at him.

But dead men do not stand up. . . . Not men left dead on the snow. . . . Men whose life you have had taken do not smile. . . . Men stiff on the snow cannot smile. . . . This combination of truths coupled in Brandon's swirling mind and struck him cold. This could be no man, then; this was an apparition, this was—

And then whatever it was spoke.

"Good morning, Brandon!"

Elliott spoke naturally and easily, and closed the door behind him. Dead men do not speak; ghosts do not open and close doors—they pass through them.

And Nicholas Brandon, gathering his faculties, lurched to his feet, panting and clenching the edge of the desk.

"Good morning," he said in a hoarse gasp. "Good . . ."

Ben Elliott laughed bitterly.

Crocodiles of State

The government of Jalpur pays out good money every day to keep crocodiles alive. It has often been said that Jalpur is the most "different" city of India. Certainly it is the only one in that country to be built on a straight-line principle and the only one to have each and every one of its buildings colored mauve or pink. The Crocodile tank is one of the sights of Rajputana, and though it is difficult to ascertain from what far distant religious or mythological rite these beasts obtained their privilege, it is a fact that they are provided with three square meals a day and are tended by a keeper. Whenever this wizardlike old man appears at the water-edge with their foods the big beasts, no matter how soundly they appear to sleep in the mud, immediately swim towards him.

Guatemala's Jungles

In Guatemala's jungles are grotesquely marked monoliths, ruins of magnificent cities and colossal temple-topped pyramids which bear witness to the existence of an Indian civilization centuries before the Christian era. In little mountain villages and in the city market places are throngs of Indians to remind one of the fact that Guatemala is still 60 per cent pure Indian.

Ancient Race Dying Out

An Ontong Warrior Gossips With Village Belles.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE population of Ontong Java, tiny group of islands east of New Guinea, is dwindling so rapidly that it appears there will be few inhabitants on the islands in a decade or two. In 1907, there were about 5,000 natives. Today there are only about 750. Passing through many of the islands' villages, one notices cleared patches and ruined houses, witnesses of the tragedy of Ontong Java. The natives have fallen easy prey to malaria, tuberculosis, influenza and other diseases.

White men tried to root out the natives' old customs instead of allowing them to die gradually; and they were only partly successful. The old color and ritual have gone, leaving in their place monotony of life and a more or less sordid outlook.

To find what the old time was like, one has to go to the older men of the village—a procedure far less satisfactory to scientists than actual observation.

Fishing is the main occupation of the men. Before they can fish, however, they must have canoes, and before canoes are made there must be tools. Since there are no metallic ores, and the soft coral is unsuitable for stone implements, tools formerly were made from clamshells, which are heavy and capable of being polished. Many of these shells are more than 2 feet across. They were ground with pumice washed up by the tide.

Few Trees on Island.

Because there are so few trees on the island, not nearly enough to provide boats for a quarter of the present population, canoes usually are made from driftwood, especially plentiful after the northwest gales to which the group is liable from November to March. One sees logs that have possibly drifted half around the world before they come to rest on the beach.

The logs are towed to the workshop where all canoes on Leuanua Island are made. The village magician is then summoned to strike the first blow and thus charm away evil spirits, so that the wood can be shaped with impunity. Nowadays it takes two men, working about six hours a day, two months to make a canoe, or even longer if the canoe be a large one. Before steel tools were used, the work must have taken much longer.

The log is first shaped on the outside; next, the inside is roughly chipped out, and from then on the outside and the inside are chipped alternately until the shell of the hull is of desired thinness. A stroke is lashed on with tough fiber and the space calked with coconut husks. The whole canoe is rubbed over with a coarse seaweed resembling lime; this not only seals up any cracks, but serves as a coating of white paint.

The outrigger booms are added—from three to nine, according to the size of the canoe—and to these is attached the outrigger float. Detachable pegs are made for the bows and the stern to deflect the waves. Then, after being charmed once more by the magician, the canoe is ready for the water.

Three-cornered sails, formerly made from pandanus leaves, are cut now from light canvas or calico. The canoe is always sailed so that the wind strikes it on the side of the outrigger; otherwise it would upsize. It cannot sail against the wind. Though the canoes are not very seaworthy, they have carried passengers on many long voyages.

Almost all the men go out daily in the canoes to catch fish, and they come home laden. If it is too stormy to use the canoes, a crowd goes to the lee side of the island to fish on the reef. Each man carries two nets, tied to two sticks in such a way as to form triangular bags. After advancing in line along the reef for some distance, the men form a semicircle, with the shore as a diameter. They close in slowly, and when they are all close-together, rush forward with a shout to catch the surrounded fish.

Children Have Their Task.

The children wait on the shore with baskets, into which the hauls are thrown. Again and again the process is repeated, till each man thinks he has caught enough.

A shoal of fish offshore may be surrounded in much the same way, the fishermen going in canoes, each provided with a long net. The nets are joined together, the shoal is surrounded, and the fish are driven ashore, caught in hand nets, or speared.

Some kinds of fish, such as the shark and the bonito, may be caught only by specialists. For the shark wooden hooks are used. The bonito falls victim to a turtle-shell hook attached to a shell lure which is trailed from sticks behind the moving canoe. With both of these fish magic ceremonies have to be performed before they can be hooked or brought ashore.

Turtles are still caught and removed alive from the shell. Thus stripped, they are kept in a specially constructed pool to grow new shells. This process may be repeated as many as three times.

Women take complete charge of the gardens, and it is their business to clear them of weeds and manure them. On the days when they go to the gardens—it is only on certain days that they are allowed to go, for fear that thefts might result from too great casualness—they dig the taro, cut off the shoots, and reset them to grow; gather some of the large, heart-shaped leaves for use in cooking; pile the lot into a basket, and carry it on their backs to the house. It is no mean load, either.

Taro is either cooked plain or made into puddings, a mixture of grated taro and coconut oil. The mess is well pounded in the food bowl and spread on leaves before it is set to cook.

Upon a roaring fire, made in the hole in the floor, coral stones are piled, and more fuel is heaped on top of them. When the fire has burnt out, the hot stones are removed, and the ash is scraped away. Half the stones are put back and covered with a layer of taro leaves, on which the food is placed. More leaves, the remaining hot stones, and either a quantity of earth or another fire complete the cooker.

The time of cooking varies with the food, taro requiring a comparatively short time, turtle and shark about 12 hours.

Use Trading Cutters.

For trips around the lagoon visitors use one of the cutters belonging to the trading stations. These cutters, of which there are ten, ply among the islands and carry coconuts from outlying places to the central depots. Each boat is capable of holding 3,000 uncooked nuts.

On Kella, one of the largest islands, there are now only seven houses, although one can count the ruins of 75. The owners having died, there was nobody to rebuild the houses and nobody to live in them if they were rebuilt. Formerly at least eight other islands besides Leuanua had comparatively large populations. Today most of their people have drifted either to Leuanua or to Pelau, the headquarters of an independent tribe at the other end of the lagoon.

Every man of these outlying islands, except members of the Pelau tribe, had a share in the land on the central island of Leuanua, and either a house of his own there or a home with relatives to which he might return. Residence on the main island went by regular yearly rotation. Some of the villages were ruled by sacred kings or priests, but one of these leaders always resided at Leuanua as head of the tribe.

Powerful families owned some of the islands, and not many years ago one of them took all the secular power from the priest then residing at Leuanua. This family established its head man as king. His descendant, Mekaike, became king of the Leuanua tribe. After the coup d'état the priests continued to exert a degree of authority on their own islands, but outside of the ceremonies they had little power at Leuanua. The last of them died several years ago.

Kella is a pleasant spot. Walking among its palms, one is reminded of a gigantic Karnak with gray-brown pillars and a green roof. Like the other islands, it has the shallow water of the lagoon on one side, with a shelving sandy beach. On the ocean side the stony reef suddenly gives way to deep water without any sand or beach.

Here one sees men picking up coconuts by means of long knives which they thrust into the husks. Without stooping, they pitch the nuts into piles of convenient size for carrying to the shore.

The husks, save for a small portion on each nut, are removed with the aid of a stick made fast in the ground. This done, strips of the remaining bits of husk are torn partly free with the teeth, and with these strips long strings of nuts are tied together. At high tide the strings are towed down to the village and loaded into the cutters. This floating saves an enormous amount of labor.

The worst coconut pest is rats, with which the outlying islands and Leuanua, too, are overrun. They are able to climb any palm that has even the slightest slope in the trunk. Nibbling around a nut till it falls, they soon have a feast.

EASTER'S ANTHEM

Multitudes, with hearts of gratitude and devoted acknowledgment, are preparing to celebrate in tuneful expression the deepest joy to human soul—the promised hope of an awaiting eternity. Easter Day is that Sacred Sunday when, not only individuals give themselves to anthems of worship, but nations and a burdened world feel the need of such an obeisance to the Almighty God thru a risen Christ, who on this most eventful day, rose again, proving man's immortality of soul and spirit.

Let Easter joy bells ring out in great harmony, filling the universe and proclaiming the glad tidings! Easter should be the greatest feast day of the year for the souls of humanity; it is the climax of the whole twelve months. The entire Christian religion, as a religion, is founded on Easter; if there had been no original Easter day, there would not now be a single Christian church in the world. Every church steeple or chimes is a symbol for Easter, for which it was made an institution of divine grace and salvation.

Next Sunday we join in celebrating this great Resurrection of nineteen hundred and thirty-five years ago, to be accurate. It is not only a privilege but the duty of everyone to go to an Easter service next Sunday. Hundreds, alas, thousands, who fail to attend church, will go on this event, for Easter and its solemnity and joy together, will mean even more to erring mankind this year for we are living just now in a chaotic state of world conditions. Man has no way to turn but to look up in the spirit of humble gratitude and penitence.

If ever there was a time to show beautiful Easter bonnets, pretty clothes and decorations of Easter lilies, this is the great opportunity, with its lesson-reminder for every child and grown-up. Let voices be tuned next Sunday in celebration of the triumph of life over death.

SILVER GROWS SCARCE

Silver is growing increasingly scarce.

The American government's silver purchase program, whereby thousands of ounces of the metal are purchased in the world market from time to time, has absorbed much of the available supply.

In addition, foreign governments which hold large quantities of silver, such as China, are showing disinclination to sell, for fear that their banking and currency systems might be disrupted as a result.

The inevitable consequence of this trend will be gradual appreciation in the value of silver—and the more demand outruns supply, the higher the price will become. That means much to the future of the mining industry, both here and abroad.

Congress is seriously considering the advisability of establishing a new cabinet seat to be known as the Department of Public Works. This will add one more to the President's Cabinet of Secretaries, and is not a new idea; but it has never got into the legislative halls for discussion. Now it is considered that advance planning and power coordination are essential factors in making a national program of public works fully effective in correcting the sag in the business cycle. It is believed that had there been such a department set up ten years ago the present depression could have been avoided or speedily terminated. In addition to this there have been frequent requests for Departments of Peace and Education, accompanied with the suggestion that Departments of War and Navy might be combined to reduce the number of posts.

Not only California, or the Nation, but America in general is getting very much aroused over the increased spread of crime in society, and forces of justice by police, and have already taken its first forward step to fight organized crime. The facts in the case point to a sign of improvement somewhat. Altho it is acknowledged that crime leaders need watching by the vigilant police eye, for it breaks out anew like a burning building; but when once the tide is turned the work of reformation will gather new strength and impetus which may permanently defeat the greater enemy of society. Statistics tell us that a person is murdered in the United States every forty-five minutes and that our crime bill is thirteen billion dollars annually!

The sweet incense of wild mustard blossoms is filling the air. This is typical of Easter time. Thus the first hint of spring is with us and as the rainy season is about to wane it is supplanted with the proverbial mellow sunshine which pours out liberal shafts of life vigor and energy to influence humanity and remind us of the better things to live for during the summer which is "just around the corner". After a strenuous season of striving to keep the business world steamed up for action, it is no hardship for the mind to contemplate a vacation and see that it is taken so as to be 100 percent beneficial.

Famous Babe Ruth has joined the Boston Braves and is all lined up ready for a great season of home runs. All base ball fans will keep their eyes on this "Sultan of Swat". Ruth goes back to the city that gave him his start in major-league baseball, for it was with the Red Sox in 1914 that he first wore a big-time uniform. This "home run king" has earned a popular position in the minds of millions, and altho more than 23 years of baseball life to his credit, he promises to make good again this year. This veteran of the bat has signed up for three years with Boston and takes the vice-presidency of the club.

"For a nation so devoted to fact-finding bodies of one sort or another, it is surprising how few facts are uncovered and how many words are employed to conceal these few."—Barron's.

VOTE FOR
RAY SAUER
FOR MAYOR

Ray Sauer says he believes in developing and beautifying our beaches, meaning that our beaches should be kept clean at all times, under a definite system of supervision, and not in the haphazard manner in which they are given attention at this time. He says the beaches are San Diego's finest asset and should be recognized and augmented in every way possible.

Ray Sauer will make a respected leader of San Diego city government. His experience and integrity justifies your vote on Tuesday, April 23rd.

WHY-

"BOW DOWN?"

Why bow down to such a thing as an old-fashioned water heater that requires lighting? Why get down on your knees to light a heater and be chained to the house while you wait for the water to heat? Why be subservient to a water heater when the water heater should serve you?

Actually hot water that you don't have to wait for . . . automatic hot water . . . costs less per gallon! You'll find modern convenience and absolute freedom from water heater serfdom in an

AUTOMATIC WATER HEATER

Now you can change your heating of water to the modern automatic method because:

Dealers throughout the county (for a limited time only, of course) will sell you an automatic water heater under these unusual terms:

(1) No down payment . . . your old water heater serves as the down payment.

(2) And in addition a substantial reduction in the regular price of the heater will be allowed.

You must see your dealer at once. This is a limited time offer only. Remember that automatic hot water costs less per gallon, too!

OF SAN DIEGO COUNTYWHAT EASTER MEANS TO A THEOSOPHIST

Easter is a beautiful season of the year. It is not merely a day; it is rather a spiritual idea. It is a celebration of the vital forces working in the spring-time, when new life is surging thru the earth and affecting all earth's children, when the trees begin to burgeon and the flowers begin to blow—when a new hope sings in men's hearts derived from the spiritual realms exactly as new life comes to the beautiful flowers.

club on Thursday, April 25th at 7:30 p. m. in the club rooms at 1940 Abbott street. The significance of the Easter season, as presented by Mrs. Shore will give food for many hours of quiet thought. All are welcome and your questions will be answered.

LOTUS CIRCLE FOR CHILDREN

A Lotus Circle for children is held every Sunday morning at 10:30 in the Theosophical lodge and club rooms at 1940 Abbott street. Lesson subject for April 21st, "Easter". Visitors and children are always welcome.

Mission Beach Personals

(Beth V. Paynter, correspondent)
(Tel. Pacific Beach 425 or 433)

Mr. and Mrs. James Foley are at the Tripp apartments for the season.

Mrs. C. C. Teter is at home again convalescing from an appendectomy.

Mrs. Isabelle C. Jerman and three daughters have moved from 822 Queenstown court to 724 Vanatie court.

Mrs. W. T. Howell and son left Sunday for San Francisco where Mrs. Howell will take a course in beauty culture.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moore of Lakeside, who have been spending the past three months at Mission Beach, are parents of an eight pound son, Theodore Oliver, born April 12.

Harry K. Turner and son, Kendall, are spending the week in Tombstone, Arizona.

Members of the Epsilon Alpha Beta sorority of the State college are having a vacation this week at 808 Seagirt court.

Mrs. Elsie Bell and daughter of San Diego, were dinner guests Monday evening of Mrs. Samuel B. Pearson, who is vacationing at 722 Windmere court.

Misses Margaret and Madeline Fairholm of Pomona, motored down to spend the week end with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Garnham. The ladies are sisters of Mrs. Garnham.

Mrs. Della Haman Johnson who has been visiting her sister here, has returned to her San Diego home.

There will be no further rubbish collections in Mission Beach on Tuesday. All collections will be on Wednesdays and will be from the alleys at rear of houses instead of from main thoroughfares.

PTA SPONSORS PUPPET SHOW

Ocean Beach PTA is sponsoring a real puppet show. "Alice in Wonderland" and "Thru the Looking Glass" will be staged, on the afternoon of Tuesday April 23rd at 3:15 p. m., in a very professional manner. The time, immediately after school lets out, will be noted. Plan to join the children on that afternoon and enjoy an hour of relaxation. The place is the auditorium of the new school building. Parents and friends of Ocean Beach children especially invited.

SILVER SPRAY POOL
WELL PATRONIZED IN SWIM

Easter vacation has meant a lot of fun and healthful recreation for children and adults who have taken advantage of the free swimming instruction given at the Silver Spray plunge the past week.

More than seventy-five registrations were made for the free swimming lessons and hundreds of youngsters enjoyed themselves immensely in the heated salt water plunge.

SLIM CROWD AT OPEN FORUM

The talk to have been delivered on National Defense, at the open forum in the school auditorium Tuesday evening by Major General Robert Alexander was postponed indefinitely as only about a dozen and a half people had congregated by 8 p. m.

No Substitute For Experience Says Rossi

Councilman Dan Rossi, who is seeking re-election on April 23, Wednesday in Ocean Beach said:

"I am basing my campaign for re-election upon my record during the last three years. During my first term in office I have sincerely endeavored to serve the citizens of San Diego honestly, capably and intelligently. I have fought for all the people all the time.

"That the voters in my own district—the fifth—appreciate my record is proven by the huge majority they gave me in the primaries. Now I must submit my candidacy to voters throughout the city, and I trust that they, like the voters of the fifth district, will see fit to reward my service and a clear record with their votes on April 23.

"Here are a few of the excerpts from my record which will show that I have served the city of San Diego honestly, faithfully and to the best of my ability:

"I personally stopped the sale of El Capitan bonds a year before they were needed, thereby saving the taxpayers the neat sum of $125,000 in interest charges. I first opposed the deal and was then joined by others:

"The records show that I have consistently fought for the appointment of a free city manager and carrying out the city charter to the letter. Remember when I submitted a list of eight of the most experienced city managers in the United States and suggested that the selection be made from the first? Remember how I balked a city manager in his attempt to purchase automobiles in violation of the charter?

"I have been consistently against all the petty racketeering attempted by self-seekers at the city hall. Remember the attempt to launch the nefarious lotto gambling game in the city? Remember how I stood on the attempted raid on the city's land by oil sharks? How I hung out for an honest deal in garbage disposal?
And rubbish handling? Have I ever failed the people in water matters?
Can you remember a single act of mine which has not been based on that great principle—the good of the city as a whole?

"Despite this reduction of total expenses by more than $1,000,000 during my three years in office, we have been able to replace all obsolete equipment and thus further reduce operating expenses."

Present School Board Members Deserve Vote

The Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce in its regular meeting of March 11, 1935, endorsed Mr. Darnall and Mrs. Muehleisen for their close attention and able administration in participation of school affairs, pledging their support to these candidates at the primary of March 26, and the city election to follow next Tuesday, April 23rd.

Re-election of Mrs. Vesta C.
Muehleisen and Orton E. Darnall to the board of education, on the basis of their years of public service on the board and to assure the continued intelligent direction of the public schools, is urged by the Progressive Educational League.

Both Mrs. Muehleisen and Mr.
Darnall have served eight years on the board, and their splendid records justify re-election, the league contends. They led the field in the primary election by wide margins.

Their experience and judgment in school matters is pointed out as being of especial value in meeting the problems that will arise in the pending economic and social readjustment.

Lutheran Mission

Good Friday Service Tonight at 7:45

It being Good Friday, the day upon which our Saviour was crucified some nineteen centuries ago, special divine services will be held at the Lutheran Mission at 7:45 this evening at the Woman's Club. The subject of the sermon will be "Christ Crucified."

"Behold the Saviour of Mankind
Nailed to the shameful tree!
How vast the love that Him inclined
To bleed and die for thee!"

Shall it be said of you that the Blood of the Son of God was shed in vain? Come closer to your Saviour by attending this service.

The Open Tomb

It is rather depressing to see the efforts of even some professing Christians to strip the Easter story of its miraculous and supernatural elements. The evidence is indisputable that the crucified Christ arose from the dead and came forth from His tomb. That fact is unmeasurably important, for "If Christ be not raised your faith is in vain, and ye are yet in your sins." Easter is the victory festival of the children of God.
Jubilant throngs assemble at the open tomb to celebrate their accomplished salvation. Join them, not only on Easter day, but enter upon a steady fellowship with Him who died for our transgressions and by His resurrection has brought life and immortality to light.

You are therefore most cordially invited to the services of the Lutheran Mission upon this great day of victory, Easter. Sunday school will be held at 9:30 o'clock. "The Resurrection Story" will be the lesson taught in all departments. Divine services will be held at 10:45 o'clock.
"Christ the Conqueror of Death" will be the subject of the sermon.
At this service also the Sacrament of Holy Baptism will be administered, eight children being received into Christian faith.

All Lutherans, as well as the general public are cordially invited to all these services which are held at the Woman's clubhouse, Newport and Abbott streets.

Methodist Episcopal Services

"Why I believe in Eternal Life" will be the topic for the sermon by the Rev. Hughes next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour. Special Easter music will be rendered by the choir; also the Fox sisters of Point Loma will sing. Reception of members and baptism of infants and adults will be observed. The prelude to the service will begin at 10:45 a. m.

In the evening the Young People will conduct a service of music to which all are invited. This service will begin at seven o'clock. Tuneful and melodious music in keeping with the triumphant Easter message will characterize the services.

Good Friday evening at 7:30 a service of devotion will be directed by the pastor. The Sacrament of the Lord's supper will be observed. All those who so desire are invited to partake of this sacrament.

TOWNSEND CLUB CARD PARTY Ocean Beach Townsend club will give a public card party at the Ocean Beach Woman's clubhouse, next Wednesday evening April 24th.

Many beautiful as well as useful articles have been given by local business houses which will go as prizes to the guests of the evening.

Tickets may be secured from Mrs.
Anna T. Marsh, 4965 Cape May avenue.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Easter Sunday evening a special musical program will be presented by the Vibraphone orchestra under the direction of Jack Croston. In the morning at 9:45 the Bible school will give an Easter program of readings and music.

At 11 o'clock the pastor will speak on the subject "The Christian Hope".
Easter music will be rendered by the choir. Mrs. Parsons, soloist.

You are cordially invited to have a part in these Easter services.

THE THEOSOPHICAL

SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"The Historic Easter" will be the subject of the public forum-lecture in the Theosophical Temple, Point Loma, next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Sven Eek, manager of Theosophical University Press and formerly instructor in French and German at the Point Loma institute, will be the speaker. He will be assisted in the answering of questions by Hazel Boyer Braun, president of the Katharine Tingley lodge of the Theosophical society in San Diego and well-known as a lecturer and writer.

Says Prof. Eek: "The secret of significance of Easter was known by the early Fathers of the Christian church as well as by the learned priests of ancient Egypt, Babylonia, Persia, and India; it formed part of the Mysteries taught at Eleusis in Greece; and Plato, Plotinus, and other great giants of human thought left the story thereof imbedded in their dialogues and writings to the students of a later age."

CHURCHES OF CHRIST,

SCIENTIST

A Lesson-Sermon on "Doctrine of Atonement" will be presented on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Among the Bible selections are these words from Ezekiel: "But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die. All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him; in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live. . . . For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God:
wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye."

A correlative passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "Every pang of repentance and suffering, every effort for reform, every good thought and deed, will help us to understand Jesus' atonement for sin and aid its efficacy; but if the sinner continues to pray and repent, sin and be sorry, he has little part in the atonement,
—in the atonement with God,—for he lacks the practical repentance, which reforms the heart and enables man to do the will of wisdom"

THE FATHER PROVIDES

Matthew 6:28-34

28. And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: 29.
And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. 30. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith. 31.
Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? 32. (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. 33. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. 34. Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself.
Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Civic Conference

Ask Support Ticket

"Vote the straight conference ticket: Wansley, second district; Wur-fel, third; Stannard, fifth, and Siebert, sixth!"

This was the word broadcast thruout the city by the Civic Affairs Conference this week, and it will be driven home to voters until the final hour before election, conference leaders declare.

Altho council candidates are running in only four districts, the second, third, fifth and sixth, next Tuesday's election will be city-wide, all registered voters in all six districts participating in the selection of four councilmen.

The campaign drawing to a close is regarded by political observers as one of the most unique in the city's history. The Conference, a non-partisan organization of men and women demanding strict charter observance and better municipal government, drafted four candidates, appealed to voters in the respective districts to support them, and landed all four candidates on the ticket in the primary election. Wansley, Wur-fel and Siebert led by wide margins in their districts, while Stannard ran a good second to the incumbent councilman in the fifth district.

All citizens are invited to tune in on a political broadcast Monday night over station KGB at 6:30 when the developments in the conference movement will be dramatized. This will be a revised version of the broadcast given over station KFSD recently, and is being repeated by popular request.

Look to Your Accessories for Chic

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT'S smarter, if you please, for this spring, than a good looking black, navy or tweed suit or frock "set off" with fetching accessories to a nicely down to the slightest detail? We confess we do not know the answer, unless it would be "more accessories." However, this we do know, that fashion has gone so unmistakably accessory-conscious, this season, the very fate of your costume depends on the chic and the charm and the correctness of the accessory items worn with it.

Which leads us to predict that you will be tempted to spend as you have never spent before on the dainty lovely neck fixings which are simply lavished on the new spring frocks and suits. Neither will you be able to resist the appeal of the intriguing costume jewelry together with ingenious little gadgets of every description.

Speaking of accessory ensembles, a veritable chamois spring fever has broken out both among fashion-alert Americans and chic Parisiennes. To demonstrate how utterly swank from headtop to fingertip yellow chamois accessories on navy are proving to be, we are illustrating a stunning ensemble to the right in the group. The pert V-back beret and classic pull-over gloves are of this soft butter-colored chamois leather. The tailored scarf with hand-stitched chamois is real news. The four-inch belt with circle buckle and the new flat bag with braided handle are also of the fashionable chamois. Yes, we agree with you that these new chamois sets are outstanding and greatly to be coveted by those who appreciate the air of distinction they impart.

The costume worn by the girl seated has about it that note of sophisticated simplicity which is high-style, convincing.

ing. Her navy novelty silk frock bespeaks discriminating taste. The wide patent leather belt is according to latest dictate of the mode. The jaunty hat is a smooth ballbun for which Paris fashionables are expressing a decided preference this spring. The real sensation about this costume is the novel gold jewelry worn with it—looks as if it were a frilled collar and cuff set. It is, however, of gold metal which is light as a feather. It would be difficult to find anything in the way of a neckline and wrist adornment that will impart a finer finesse to a simple navy or black afternoon dress, than these very unusual jewelry sets.

Frilly, fluttery neckwear means everything to the new costumes. If your yearning leans to animated little lingerie pleatings and ruffings and frilled jabots and lace collars and cuffs which carry alluring feminine appeal now is the moment to see your fondest hopes realized, for fashion makes fanciful neckwear the center of attraction this season. The sheer white finely pleated jabot at the top to the left in the picture is typical of the new trend. The hat worn by this vitagraph star is excellent style since it is of quilted taffeta banded with shiny rough black straw. Milliners are making a feature of quilted fabrics for spring. Her little galyak shoulder cape is also up-to-the-moment, for dainty fur separate pieces are very important in the current mode.

The lingerie blouse with a very frilly frill has come into its own this season. Note the attractive organdie and lace model to the left below in the picture. It has wee crochet buttons—two dozen or more down the front. The nifty little pill-box turban is hand made of the new glass ribbon straw.

CHIC SPRING FURS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Dainty furs and fur trimmings tuned to spring are conspicuously in the limelight at present. For sportswear or for early springtime this cunning snow-flecked weasel jacket is an excellent choice for a young woman of fashion. Shading from a yellowish beige to a soft brown it harmonizes with browns or the new pastels which are so popular this spring.

Turquoise Jewelry

Turquoise jewelry is enjoying quite a vogue at present. Long strands of small beads are worn, twisted several times around the neck or the arm, with one detachable clip to match holding the different strings in place.

FEMINE CURVES COME INTO FAVOR

The perennial question of the great American figure is before us again, and this time the consensus is decided—we are to have feminine curves this year.

Not the Mae Westian curves of yesterday, nor yet the wasp waist of the Gibson girl, but a happy compromise—a return to natural contours.

Rosina McDowell Lynn, of the McDowell school of costume design says the new trend toward natural curves is all due to Mussolini and Hitler, and their policy of encouraging women to concentrate on the nursery.

She says the American figure follows the trend of the times, toward a more normal state of mind, and predicts that the spinach-and-grapefruit diets of the last few years are on the way out.

Flecked White Linens Are Popular for Spring Frocks

Heavy white linens splashed with multicolored flecks (achieved by sprinkling in small bright bits of cloth while the material is being woven) and cream linens embroidered in red and black figures are used for frocks. A new "blotting paper pink," flame and pastel tints are favorite colors for linen frocks this year; green, brown and gray are smart for suitings.

Linen corsets, lingerie, gloves, bags, hats and shoes are among the novelties launched this spring. Golf suits and tea gowns, evening frocks and flying suits, summer dresses and tennis shorts are also being fashioned in the new flax weaves.

Velvet Ensemble Favored

Velvet ensembles or velvet dresses with long narrow fitting capes of graceful line are being worn with matching gloves and hats in London.

PATTERN 2159

In spite of its very definite air of chic, this is the sort of dress that an experienced seamstress can run up in an hour or so—and even a beginner really should take no longer than a day to finish it. Just to show you how very simple it is, we've given you a little sketch of how the frock will look before you sew up the side seams. See—there are only four pieces to the whole body of the dress, and the sleeves and shoulders are cut in one, which does away with the setting-in of sleeves! Make it of any pretty inexpensive cotton material—use gay buttons—you'll be sure to pat yourself on the back when you see the result!

Pattern 2159 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 takes 3½ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Every year, when the nights begin to lengthen and the great outdoors loses its lure, my old friend Cassidy turns up and proffers a request for ten dollars, more if he thinks I look good natured. So I was not surprised when I heard the familiar "Hey Bo!" behind me, and turning about beheld him standing in the door and regarding me appraisingly.

"Just a couple of vees," he said, as I swung around in my chair. "Just something to keep the wolf off the brownstone front till I find another lay. Me an' hard luck has been pailin' around as usual, but everything will be O.K. soon. I'd of been all right now if I'd of been able to guess what a fish was likely to do. But I don't believe anybody can do that, not even the fish himself. An' ain't I got to eat while I'm thinkin' up some new way to get the eggs an' bacon?"

"Tell me more," I said, with no movement toward my pocket.

"It was this way. I was down to one of them summer resorts south of the big town, conductin' a game of chance, but it seems that there's a prejudice down that way against leadin' dice an' markin' cards. Pretty soon I got a invitation from the chief of police to move along to some other resort before he felt it his duty to provide me with an iron room for a few months. It's bad luck to talk back to one of them fellers, an' I dusted out to another shore place that as yet had not enjoyed the pleasure of my acquaintance, an' where my reputation hadn't been spread abroad in high an' low society.

"Havin' a little money an' plenty of time while I was waitin' for somethin' to barge in an' make my fortune for me, I got a bayman to take me out swordfishin' one afternoon. I'm always willing to try anything once, an' since I seen a feller ketchin' a swordfish in a newsy reel I sort of hankered to try it. The guy that took me out knowed where the swordfish is parked, an' inside of an hour I'd hooked one of them. While I was fightin' him an' noticin' how he worked, an' how fast he was on his fins the idea come to me.

"Right away I put out my line, but this time I told the boatman not to kill the fish when I got him alongside, but to run the boat ashore towin' him along behind, which he done. When he got in we hitched up to a pier the fisherman had in his back yard an' I went up to town an' had some printin' done. It looked to me at the time as the surest fire graft I had ever thought out, an' I was nervous for fear somebody was already workin' it along shore.

"The next morning me an' the fisherman built us a pen by the side of the dock—a pen about twenty yards square, an' we plopped our fish into it. Then we built us another pen, went out an' caught us another fish, and put him into it.

"After that I got busy distributin' my printin' an' inside of ten days there wasn't no talk in that town about anythin' but the big sword fish fight that was comin' off. They was crowds down to the place from breakfast time to sundown, sizin' up the fish an' considerin' their p'int, an' when some of the women's organizations began crusadin' to have the fight stopped on the ground of it's bein' brutal an' inhumane, I knew the show would go over with a vow. Of course there was a little trouble at first with some of the town officials, but when they come down to see what was doin' I tipped them off to the fish that was sure to win, on account of his weight an' form an' they just went back and got their money ready to bet.

"Of course I set the date back now an' then so as to give the news a chance to get out around the countryside so we would have a good audience. The only thing I was afraid of was city reporters, but a big story had broke in Philadelphia a couple of days before, an' only the local correspondents was around. They was nice friendly boys, an' tickled to pieces with gettin' a good yarn an' it never seemed to enter their minds that I was givin' the show just to improve the breed of swordfish. Their papers circulated mostly in the farmin' towns 'round about, an' that was the kind of circulation I was lookin' for. You don't want mean suspicious city folks at a show of that kind. You want the sort that is used to takin' a likin' now an' then, an' gets to like it, if they can get a run for their money.

"I didn't know nothin' about how to feed fish to make 'em game, but I got a half dozen barrels of herring or mackerel or whatever was the cheap fish around there, an' divided 'em up between our gladiators. I divided 'em up so's the one that we caught first, which was the fastest an' meanest lookin', had just enough to keep him in condition an' hungry, while the other one got all he could eat, an' didn't want to do much after dinner but lay on the bottom an' dream pleasant dreams. He was havin' the time of his life, an' I don't believe you could of chased him out of the place with a pike pole.

"When the day of the fight come around there was people swarin' in with cars from back forty miles, an' others cluggin' up in a regular circus parade of motor boats. We'd had a temporary platform built out over-lookin' the pen where the battle was to come off, an' before the gate was opened to let the two fish together in the arena there was boys sellin' space on the roofs of every house along shore. An' what kind of spoiled my enjoyment of the overcoat pocket full of bills I'd collected, was lookin' at a big ferry boat some crook had chartered an' anchored about a hundred yards away where all his passengers, an' there must have been two hundred of 'em, could get a better view of the comin' scrap than any of our customers could get. That made a lot of complaints, but I told everybody that the ferryboat was an official craft sent down by the state authorities to see that everything was above board, and of course you couldn't keep officials from bringin' their friends along.

"Just at noon we run up the flag that announced that the fight was to start, an' ten minutes afterward we opened the alleys that led into the arena from the two pens. I had one eye on a little motor boat I'd chartered an' kept tied to the dock near me so if anything should go wrong I wouldn't have to stay there an' make it right, an' the other eye on the feller who was my bettin' commissioner. I expected to see the fight last about six or eight minutes, which would be time enough for the half fed fish to run the other so full of holes that he'd be too leaky to float more than a minute.

"But a feller that ain't brought up with swordfish don't know nothin' about 'em. My little lithe wiry feller that I'd bet my roll on made one dash for the arena, swims a lap around it, sees the big loggy fish he could of killed in one jab, an' what does he do but jump clear over the net around the fightin' ring an' light out for blue water as fast as he could leg it.

"I turned around to find my stakeholder an' tell him to jump into the motor boat but he was a quarter of a mile out to sea an' goin' like a streak. The only reason I didn't foller him was because the crowd whose money he'd lit out with seemed to hold me responsible. What do you think of that?"

"Yeah. I spent a couple of weeks in the hoosegow, an' when they let me out they had to take me in the night to the town limits so the citizens couldn't reason with me about that money. You see I'd pointed out the wrong fish by mistake to the chief of police, an' he won on him an' thought I'd done him a favor. That's why I only served two weeks. Him an' the police judge fixed it up between them an' divided a pretty good pot.

"No, I ain't got no game I'm startin'. All I want's that ten spot. I guess I'm slowin' up at my job, an' I'm goin' to see if runnin' straight is as good a graft as some of them preachers say it is."

"Shop-Talk" Classed as Self-Forgetfulness

One of the last arts to mature in a young society is the art of conversation. At its best, conversation is a kind of impromptu orchestra, each player improvising in perfect harmony, time and tune, tossing the theme from instrument to instrument, the themes developing and changing, discarded or resumed at the caprice of the players. This of course presupposes that the subject of the conversation be impersonal, that it be free to range pretty much over the whole field of human experience. Such conversation is first met with in the form of shop-talk, and the reason shop-talk among people of the same interests or profession (in which is included school studies) is so popular may be that here, perhaps for the first time, we learn how delightful it can be to exercise our minds in company with others to the total exclusion and forgetfulness of our tiresome selves.

That is why students talk so eagerly about their school tasks, why business and professional people so madly innocent by-sitters with technical discussions of the minutiae of their trades; why artists, musicians and scholars persecute the public with their passionate dissertations. But there is a stage beyond this, where human interests are broad enough and deep enough to embrace everybody, where the whole of experience is the subject.

"Clever but indiscriminating," "undiscriminating because the past is not alive to them," "Highbrow? Anything rather than that!"—this is a good-natured appraisal of how our sophisticated New Yorkers make it appear to Europeans. The objection to them is that they do not know enough, either about the past or their own country. But the condition is temporary. A passion for learning has sprung up in our land since the war which, given time, should turn out a crop of men and women able to interpret America to Europe as it really is, and not as a glorified Wisconsin. After the fire of the World war, after the whirlwind of the Jazz decade, after the earthquake of the economic depression cometh the still small voice of the spirit.—"Uncle Dudley," in the Boston Globe.

Crocheted Rug in "Cubes and Stars"

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

This is another rug design that our readers will recognize as taken from the "Cubes and Stars" quilt design that is possibly a hundred years old. This rug measures thirty inches and requires about two pounds of material to crochet. It is made up of 12 diamonds and slip stitched together to form a star or blocks, depending on the way the color scheme is worked out. It is always an interesting rug to study (count the cubes) and well adapted for a child's room.

This is one of the twenty beautiful crocheted rugs shown in colors with directions in rug book No. 24. If this rug interests you send 15c to our Rug Department and get the instructions for making this rug and nineteen others.

LAURIE HIGGINS AT MISSION BEACH SUNDAY

Laurie Higgins and his orchestra have been booked to play for a colorful Easter ball to be held at the Mission Beach ballroom on Easter Sunday night.

The Higgins group is undoubtedly the finest orchestra ever developed locally. They first came to the attention of the public last spring when H. L. Northern brought them from State College to play at the Mission Beach Ballroom on Friday nights. Their smooth music and catchy rhythm immediately caught the fancy of dance fans and they became San Diego's most popular dance band. Later, Mr. Northern, recognizing their possibilities, hired them to play for the summer season.

In keeping with the spirit of the day, a huge display of balloons, Easter novelties, and flowers will be showered on the dancers.

LIEUT. BERT A. ALLEN
POST No. 2415
AND AUXILIARY

At the meeting held Thursday April 11th, Frank W. Garzarella, J. E. McCaffrey, Harry S. Remington, Earl T. E. Stixrude and Jean Young were formally initiated into membership in the post. We greet you, comrades, and hope that your sojourn among us may be long and pleasant.

The Degree team from Gordon M. Dawson post officiated in a most impressive manner. Our thanks and appreciation to Dawson post for their good work and assistance.

A short business meeting will be held on Thursday, April 25th, following which foaming refreshments will be served. Come and help us to discuss some matters of the utmost importance to you and your post.

Three exceptionally good speakers will be heard at this meeting. First on the program will be A.J. "Daddy" Allen, father of the post who will give the members a history of his son's (Lieut. Bert A. Allen after whom the post is named) life and service in the great war. Those who have heard Daddy Allen speak in the past will be glad to know that they are again to be privileged to hear the Daddy of our post in action. To those who have not yet had the pleasure of hearing him, a treat is in store.

In addition to Daddy Allen, two other very good speakers will be heard, Comrade Jack Anderson of Dawson post and Comrade "Doggie" Ryan of Connally post. These leaders in Veteran circles will speak on matters of the greatest importance to all members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Come and hear!

Auxiliary

Saturday, April 13 a bazaar and cooked food sale was held at the Woman's club, and a card party in the evening. A lovely strand of pearls was won by Mrs. Bette Knauer of Muir avenue and Mrs. Biddle of Green street won the quilt. Mrs. Bell, a visitor from Washington, D. C. won the first prize in 500 and Mrs. Whaling second. In bridge Mr. Ragen from La Jolla won first and Mrs. Marsh second. The whole affair proved very successful thanks to the committee and friends both in and out of the organization.

At the meeting of the auxiliary Thursday, April 11, Mrs. Lorraine Remington of Muir avenue was formally initiated into the auxiliary. Mrs. Remington who arrived at the beach this winter is the wife of Harry S. Remington who recently retired from active duty in the Marine corps. We extend our greetings to our newest member.

EVANGELIST SERVICES AT PACIFIC BEACH
